Roosevelt Again Cuts Landon Lead in Digest's Poll

Kansan's Percentage Drops From 58.4 to 57.9, and Now 56.9

27 STATES, LANDON

13 for Roosevelt—and Missouri Switches Over to the Kansan

Landon's lead over Roosevelt decreases again for the fifth consecutive time to slightly less than 3 to 2 in the sixth report of The Literary Digest's Presidential Poll.

A total 1,254,716 votes reported are split 713,451 for Landon, 485,392 for Roosevelt, 44,825 for Lemke and 11,048 for the four minor candidates: Thomas, Browder, Colvin and Aiken.

Of the forty states which are represented in the current returns thirteen are for Roosevelt, while Landon is shown getting a plurality or majority in twenty-seven.

Initial ballots are received from nine additional states this week in the poll, four of which go to Roosevelt and five to Landon.

Kentucky is indicated voting nearly 3 to 2 and Maryland nearly 5 to 4 for Roosevelt.

First ballots from Massachusetts and Rhode Island each give the Republican candidate better than a 3 to 1 majority.

Tennessee's initial tally shows 9,840 votes for Roosevelt to 5,381 for Landon.

Wisconsin goes into the Republican column by 3 1/2 to 2 lead for Landon and it also gives Lemke over 6 per cent of the state's vote.

Wyoming joins the Republican column by approximately the same ratio as Wisconsin.

Nevada gives Landon a fractional lead and New Mexico votes a scant plurality for Roosevelt in the first scattering returns from those states.

Of the thirty-one states from which returns were reported last week twenty-six show increased percentages for Landon and six show decreases during the week.

Kansas, Nebraska and Washington show substantial gains for the Republican candidate while the chances in the other states are minor or fractional.

Missouri Turns to Landon

Missouri, which gave Roosevelt a plurality last week, enters the Republican column this week with a

China Clipper on Initial Passenger Voyage to Orient

Giant Plane Reaches Hawaii Safely, and Takes Off for Midway

IS ABLY PREPARED

Clipper Fleet Has Made 27 Roundtrips Carrying Mail Only

ABOARD THE CHINA CLIPPER, Pacific ocean — (AP) — The China Clipper, making her first flight with commercial passengers after 27 roundtrips carrying mail between the United States and the Orient, left Pearl Harbor, Manaii, Friday with her next destination Midway Island, 1,323 miles away.

The China Clipper had alighted in Honolulu, Hawaii, early Friday morning from Alameda, Calif. amidst the songs and handclapping of guests. Seventeen hours and 48 minutes actual flying time were behind her.

Hawaiian girls hung great leis about the necks of the passengers when they stepped out on the landing float. Officials followed with congratulations on the completion of the preliminary passenger flight to Honolulu, on the way to Manila, from Alameda, Calif.

The appearance of army and navy planes which flew close to her wings, signalled the approach to Hawaii.

The China Clipper approached the great island of Oahu on which Honolulu is situated, circled once across the day and then, turning in gradual descent, dropped down to the smooth surface of Pearl Harbor, adjacent to America's greatest naval base. The official reception followed.

Achievement Day Program on 17th

Displays of Farm and Home Products to Be Made in Fair Park

The Hempstead County Home Demonstration Club Council and the Hempstead county Farm Bureau are jointly sponsoring an Achievement day program to be held at Fair park in Hope Saturday, October 17, according to an announcement by W. E. Mount.

It is the largest total of registrants the Democrats have ever boasted, and the lowest Republican registration for any presidential election since 1924.

There will be display of farm and home products and equipment. This will be an all day gathering with dinner served picnic style. Farmers and merchants who desire to display their products or equipment should get in touch with the county agent or home demonstration agent.

The Rocky Mound and the Melrose Home Demonstration clubs will be co-hostesses to the group.

In addition to the individual canning exhibit, the club pantry stores exhibit, and handicrafts there will be exhibits of poultry and dairy products.

The public is invited to attend.

Dr. Klink Speaks to Hope Rotarians

Tabernacle Evangelist Makes Effective Address on "Sincerity"

Dr. Otto J. Klink, evangelist who is conducting a revival service at the Gospel Tabernacle, and who is a former under-secretary to the German kaiser, made an interesting and effective ethical talk on "Sincerity" before Hope Rotary club Friday noon in Hotel Barlow.

Punctuated with humor, the speaker's address was interspersed with illustrations of how hard it is for a person to practice sincerity every day in every walk of life. But, he added, it is the duty of every Christian citizen to practice it.

Other guests Friday were: The Rev. Bert Webb, Tabernacle pastor; Guy E. Bayse; and two members of the Hope Bohemian squad, Vasco Bright, quarterback, and Freeman Stone, right tackle.

French Government Strikes at Leader of Suspected Organization

METZ, France — (AP) — Antonio Bertrazzo, described as an attaché of the Italian consulate, was gravely wounded in a surprise attack by unidentified motorists Friday in a region already troubled by agitation against Communist plans for demonstrations over the week-end.

The shooting threatened to serve as a prelude to bloody clashes between Communists and Fascists.

French Raid Fascists

PARIS, France — (AP) — Communist of "Prison for la Roque" rang through Paris Thursday night with the opening of a series of raids on 37 Fascist "Social party" centers, of an inquiry against Col. Francois de la Roque, former leader of the outlawed Croix de Feu, and his chief lieutenants.

A small dagger, with a swastika hilt, was among the articles seized in a raid on de la Roque's summer home at Versailles.

Angry defiant, de la Roque charged that the government was operating "under orders from Moscow" and was committing "acts which dishonor it." "I have protested against this police measure," he said, "I shall take definite issue with the government on the legality of any judicial acts which may ensue. Moreover, I shall continue my activities."

Nye Flayed for a "Political Trick"

Senator Clark Upbraids Him for Publicizing Elliott Roosevelt

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Publication of a senate munitions committee deposition that Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president, had contracted to sell airplanes abroad was termed Thursday by Senator Clark (Dem., Mo.) "as cheap a political trick as has been seen in years."

Clark, a member of the committee, advocated enactment of a protective law. The zoo several days ago was presented with a 10-foot alligator caught in Hempstead county by a 12-year old boy.

"Save our alligators?" queried Carl E. Bailey, gubernatorial nominee. "I don't know anything about alligators. If the game and fish commission desires to make any recommendation, I'll give it every consideration."

Beaulieu Sterwood Hagg, of Little Rock, literary and tour editor of the Federal Writer's Project, touched off the new fight for the reptile in a letter to the "People's Column" of the Arkansas Gazette recently.

A 10-year campaign to build the Camden-to-Hope highway of 40 miles would be ended.

D. B. Hill has the contract for grading and Hill & Smith have the contract for the bridges and structures. The Arkansas Highway Commission recently awarded these contracts, totaling more than $35,000. There will remain a short gap, but other funds will be available for completion of the entire route to Rosston.

From Camden to the Nevada county line, a distance of 18 miles, Highway 4 has been completed with a modern gravelled route. The road ends abruptly at a tree, and from there to Rosston, 12 miles away, there is nothing but a country lane.

All crippled children of Hempstead county up to 19 years of age are asked to register at the office of Mrs. Flora Cotton Slater at Hope city hall. Transportation will be arranged.

Crippled patients will be given expert examination and diagnosis by specialists in the field of bone and joint surgery and following the clinic, with the parents' consent, all children who can be benefited will be provided the necessary treatment recommended.

There will be no cost for examination, on that day.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — (Special) — Secretary of the Navy Swanson intimates the United States is ready to go the limit if an armament race develops when the present treaties expire in December, so the first thing you know the pacifists will be after his scalp. Funny thing about these pacifists is they don't believe in being ready for war, but none of them will leave his house at night without locking the doors, bolting down the windows and looking out to see if the cop it on his job, and even the G. O. P. vice-presidential candidate keeps his money in a bank vault. Haven't made an extensive study of it, but so far as I remember I've never seen any statistics proving a cow can get a square meal from a concrete roadway.

Legislative Protection to Be Sought for Hempstead 'Gators

They Do a Lot of Good, Eating Gars and Turtles Which Feed on Game Fish, Experts Claim

LITTLE ROCK — (AP) — The sleepy Arkansas alligator, harassed for many years by hunters and lasso experts, cocked a hopeful eye today toward the statehouse and the January legislative session.

For he found himself championed in a new move to obtain legislation imposing heavy fines on those who disturb his slumbers in the southwest section of the state.

The alligators, authorities said, abound in Miller, Hempstead and Lafayette counties.

The state game and fish commission called attention to their value, the curator of the Little Rock zoo urged that a protective law be enacted and the Democratic nominee for governor said he would "give every consideration to recommendations of the commission."

"We have some alligators left along Red river," said Lee Miles, game and fish commission chairman. "They are found in lakes which have been created by the river changing its course."

"They do a lot of good. They eat gars and turtles which feed upon game fish. The alligator doesn't bother the game fish because he is too slow to catch them."

"It seems that our people don't appreciate the alligator either as a unique oddity or a protector of the fish. They take and destroy the alligator as a matter of fun."

"We have no law against it but I am hoping that the people will see the advantage of preserving and protecting him. We have been trying to educate our citizens to this end."

A Protective Law

W. R. Spratt, Little Rock zoo curator, advocated enactment of a protective law. The zoo several days ago was presented with a 10-foot alligator caught in Hempstead county by a 12-year old boy.

"Save our alligators?" queried Carl E. Bailey, gubernatorial nominee. "I don't know anything about alligators. If the game and fish commission desires to make any recommendation, I'll give it every consideration."

Building of No. 4 Highway Is Begun

Contractor Is Closing the Gap Between Camden and Rosston

CAMDEN, Ark. — Equipment and machinery are being moved to Highway 4, 18 miles west of Camden, by the contractors, and construction of the last 12-mile gap in this cross-state route will be started immediately, Frank Gerig, district highway supervisor, said here Thursday.

A 10-year campaign to build the Camden-to-Hope highway of 40 miles would be ended.

D. B. Hill has the contract for grading and Hill & Smith have the contract for the bridges and structures. The Arkansas Highway Commission recently awarded these contracts, totaling more than $35,000. There will remain a short gap, but other funds will be available for completion of the entire route to Rosston.

Widow, Missing, Is Believed Slain

Massachusetts Police on Trail of Legs Found in Harbor Waters

BOSTON, Mass. — (AP) — Discovery of "bloodstained sheets" in the cottage of a widow in nearby Weymouth Thursday night sent police to that town in their search for solution of a mystery brought about with discovery four days ago of a woman's legs in Boston harbor.

Deputy Supt. James R. Claffin said the sheets were discovered by Detectives William Crowley and Raymond Monahan, in the untenanted summer cottage of Mrs. Grace Asquith, 40.

He said they also found a newspaper dated July 12, a newspaper of the same date was found inside burlap wrapping around the legs discovered four days ago.

"I think this is a good lead," Claffin said.

Earlier Police Chief Edward Butler of Weymouth, reporting Mrs. Asquith's disappearance, said:

"I've an idea this may be the woman whose legs were found in the harbor."

In the cottage, police found a set but unopened, mouldy meal, a newspaper dated September 21 beside it.

The police description of the missing widow checked in many details with the one Medical Examiner William J. Brickley gave of the victim of the harbor mystery after a careful examination of the dismembered legs. Neighbors told police the woman lived alone, was attractive, and between 35 and 40.

England's Labor Party Asks Arms for Madrid City

Investigation Certain as to Effect of the Neutral-ity Pact

REBELS WIN AGAIN

Fascist Rebels Smash Thorough in West in 3 Powerful Columns

LONDON, Eng. — (Copyright Associated Press) — A Russian expression of satisfaction came Friday from a secret session of 21 European states pondering the grave continental crisis created by Moscow and Madrid charges that Fascist assistance was being given the Spanish rebels.

At Edinburgh the national executive committee of the Labor party presented a party conference statement demanding that Great Britain and France open the arms markets to Madrid if an inquiry discloses that the international neutrality pact is either ineffective or has been broken.

In Paris informed sources said Premier Blum of France, and British Foreign Secretary Eden have agreed to exert every effort to prevent the collapse of the non-intervention accord.

Due west of Madrid the Fascists smashed through the rugged terrain in three powerful columns to capture strategic cities.

CIBEROS, Spain — Fascist soldiers drove Gen. Julio Mangada's government troops out of Navalperal, their mountain redoubt northwest of Madrid, in a final bloody push Thursday which crowned two weeks of constant attacks.

The last surge started at dawn when over 1,500 bombs were dropped on government lines northwest of Navalperal, which is 45 miles northwest of Madrid and about 10 miles north of Ciberos.

A squadron of insurgent bombers came and went "with terrible regularity," authoritative sources said, dropping their loads and then returning to Avila for more.

Insurgent artillery shelled the village as the bombing planes swooped low, strafing the government soldiers.

The defending artillery squads stuck to their field pieces but their fire was weaker than that of the Fascists.

General Mangada's armored train endeavoring to silence the insurgent guns, sent barrage after barrage into their lines.

When the shelling and bombing ceased, the Fascists, who were reported to be mostly brave Moors, leaped to the assault and a bitter hand-to-hand struggle ensued.

The government militiamen were slowly driven from the lines they had held for nearly three months.

Their retreat was orderly, Fascist officers said. The number of government casualties was not known.

Germany Answers Russia

BERLIN, Germany — (AP) — The German Foreign Office Thursday night attacked the Soviet campaign in London as an attempt to save a "Comintern venture" in Spain.

A Foreign Office statement said that the Soviet government, by throwing its weight against the Spanish Fascists, hoped "to rescue the revolutionary capital invested in Spain by the Comintern."

"The true Soviet motive for an offensive becomes clear," a Foreign Office spokesman said, "if one considers frankly the expressed disillusionment over the fact that the cause of the Spanish Popular Front—despite support given it—is not making the military progress hoped for in Moscow."

A spokesman expressed astonishment that the Soviet Union, "of all powers," should feel itself competent to appear in the role of a denouncer. It was, he said, "hardly sincere" that Soviet Russia should "accuse other states of doing what it, itself, has long been doing."

"The whole world," he declared, "understands perfectly Moscow's interest in the Bolshevization of Spain."

Nerve Irritation and Gulping of Food Are Among Causes of Hiccups

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

Ordinary hiccups are familiar to everyone.

When one breathes, the diaphragm contracts. The diaphragm is a large muscle separating the abdominal cavity from that of the chest. Movements of the diaphragm are controlled by a nerve which passes down to it from the upper part of the spinal cord in the region of the neck.

If this nerve is irritated at any point, the stimulation brought about by the irritation causes the constant spasm or contraction of the diaphragm, resulting in hiccup.

The nerves are, of course, associated also with a central control in the brain. Abscesses or irritation resulting from inflammation of the tissues around this central control may cause long-continued hiccup.

There are other cases which are called chemical hiccups. These follow the eating of highly irritating foods or liquids.

If hiccups begin suddenly and disappear promptly, they are due usually to temporary causes, such as irritation from food, sudden dilatation of the stomach which may follow a surgical operation, or some temporary stimulus affecting the nerves.

Hiccups that last over long periods (weeks or months) usually to move persistent cause affecting the central area in the brain. Occasionally, however, long-continued hiccups are due to emotional causes, with a hysterical element. Such hiccups will not stop until the emotional reaction is broken at some point. Everybody has his own cure for ordinary hiccups. In emotional cases, the remedy may be a fixing of the attention on some new object or interest. Even in the physical cases, the shifting of attention may lower the threshold of irritation and thus bring about cessation of the hiccups.

Some common superstitions are that hiccups may be cured by standing in a corner and counting to 100, pressing on the upper lip, pressing on the roof of the mouth, taking five or seven sips of water, eating a dry piece of bread, or some similar simple performance.

In persistent cases, doctors may wash out the stomach, prescribe narcotics or sedatives that will lower the threshold of irritation and give temporary relief, give enemas or doses of oil to clean out the entire intestinal tract, or attack the problem in some such manner.

Babies frequently have hiccups after swallowing food too rapidly with a considerable amount of air. If the baby is held on the shoulder and patted on the back, it will expel the air that is causing the hiccups.

In some instances, hiccups are so severe that they seem to threaten life itself, and surgical operations have been performed to cut off the stimulations passing through the nerve to the diaphragm.

Such surgical operations are, however, serious and are not attempted unless the condition has reached the stage in which it threatens life.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Right Punishment for Wrong-doing Is Perplexing Problem Parents Face

Discipline and punishment are two separate things.

Discipline means to make oneself do, or not do, things (or have somebody else do them) and punishment is penalty for offence. It may be an offence against discipline or against the law.

The right disciplined child will need little punishment. But the problem here, the eternal problem indeed of all parents, is this. Can there be discipline without punishment?

Yes. Certainly. But not always. Because one of the necessary things to ingrain an idea of the pay demanded by infraction is often some sort of retribution. Read that over. Simple when you get at the roots.

Method Depends on Child

What do I think of whipping? Well, I don't think too much of it, but I do think some. There are children and children. Some will be ruined by one whipping. Others will know no other language and will only respect a burning skin. He is your child, so I cannot tell you. But there is one thing that every mortal being of us has to learn, and that is to take pay for what we deliberately do that is wrong.

What the child thinks is right, who may think is wrong. In this case, I should look very, very carefully into motives that prompt misbehavior. Or what you think is misbehavior. Children have a code. They have odd reasons for doing things. Frequently their most noble efforts are mistaken for deliberate disobedience. This is as true as the North Star. But in the case of the deliberately defiant child, someone, somehow, must show him that he can't be running the world in the way most agreeable to him. It is kindness to bring him to his senses.

Punishment may lose its effect. Whipping, it is well known, becomes as useless as water on a duck's back. And it can act in reverse, setting up a grim defiance in the child that may be saved up for years. Maybe he gets merely hopeless and loses forever and all time any will of his own to do anything. Maybe he decides that he is going to earn his whippings and get all he can by hook or mostly crook.

Yes. Whipping has to be seriously considered. The very sensitive child may wilt under one, while the hearty little rascal won't be influenced one way or the other by a dozen.

Frightening Is Taboo

There are various ways of punishment, known to almost every parent, and the way to use them is to study the child. One is deprivation of a pleasure. Another is to isolate the offender from his friends and family. Never in the dark. Never closed in a closet.

Frightening and threatening of any sort is as out as last spring. Or rather last winter. That is not punishment, that is inquisition. Threats of a milder sort are silly. They never work. Reasonable warning is different. Children have to be told what may happen if they do things they know are dangerous.

Will your child love you if you punish him? Certainly he will if he has faith in your judgments. And knows that you know best and are reasonable and just. Otherwise he doesn't love you anyway. But you'll never regain him by smacking.

HOLLYWOOD

By Paul Harrison

Baby Shirley Is Miss Temple Now!

HOLLYWOOD—Shirley Temple's studio is having growing pains. The company, I mean, is suffering twinges vicariously because its World's No. 1 Box Office Companion is growing up.

This is not immediately alarming, of course. Miss Temple is only 7 years and 5 months old, and certainly has some years of childhood stardom ahead of her. Nevertheless, there are signs. The tape measure and scales tell part of the story; her new talents and interests reveal the rest. When the Wander Tot of talkietown begins vamping a bevy of Boy Scouts, film fans may as well resign themselves to the fact that babyhood is behind her.

Take actual dimensions, in inches and ounces: Her last quarterly physical examination, given by the State Board of Education, revealed that since the previous examination she had grown three-quarters of an inch—to an even four feet; and that she had gained three pounds and now weighs 63.

That's again of about eight inches and 26 pounds since the day, in 1933, that the tiny Temple made her screen debut. She's already embarrassed by the memory of those "Baby Burlesk" comedies in which she appeared in spangled costumes of infantile design, secured at a critical point by a huge and shameless safety pin.

Keeping Her Small
Though small, Miss Temple already is being made to appear smaller by certain camera tricks. You may notice that she's seldom photographed full length with short persons, for by contrast she would appear larger than she really is. A good many tall adults now are being cast in her pictures.

The Temple feet aren't growing proportionately. She still wears a child's 11-C, which is a welcome indication that she's going to be a daintily-formed girl, and likely will escape much of the early "teen-age awkwardness."

Some significant changes have been occurring in her mannerisms and interests. For one thing, she now is perfectly aware that she is a truly great screen star.

It is to the everlasting credit of her parents, teachers, directors, and herself that there still is no indication of spoiling. The main difference is that she now—and only within the last few weeks—is willing to talk about her work in pictures.

Earned $300,000

The Temples now have a new house, in Santa Monica. Besides a larger yard and a playhouse for Shirley, there is a projection room. She watches her pictures critically, almost impersonally. Still believes that "Little Miss Marker" was her best film. She studies the work of other actors, too, and is especially anxious to appear with Jean Herscholt.

She has earned, so far, about $300,000, and except for income taxes, almost every dime of it has been saved for her. Her total income, counting indorsements, is still approximately $5000 a week.

Her revised contract calls for only three pictures a year, but five stories now are in preparation for her at Twentieth Century-Fox. "Dimples" is her current release. The next will be "Stowaway," then "Sunbonnet Sue." After that, "Wee Willie Winkie," a Kipling yarn, "Enchanted Voyage," and another original as yet untitled.

Not Precocious

Studying with a private tutor, she is in grade 3-A. Such advancement isn't especially precocious, but the Temples don't want her to work too hard or advance too rapidly. Shirley also studies French. She enjoys drawing and all sorts of school handiwork.

Her favorite toy is a small car given her by Bill Robinson, the famous negro dancer who teaches her most of her dance routines. The car is adjusted to a maximum speed of about eight miles an hour, and, of course, isn't allowed on the streets. Her favorite playmate is the 12-year-old son of the late Barbara LaMar who, after his mother's death, was adopted by Zasu Pitts. Shirley does all the cleaning in her playroom and playhouse, and washes and irons her doll's clothes.

She is making more and more ap-

She is making more and more appearances in public, although she still is put to bed at 9 o'clock except on evenings when her pictures are previewed. Until about a year ago, she wasn't allowed to attend her previews.

Naturally she has developed a good deal of poise. During her recent vacation there was a Catholic convention in Seattle and Shirley made an extremely temperate speech in a hotel lobby. She said, "I am very happy to be here, and I thank you for the lovely badge."

During that same vacation, government rangers staged a show while the Temples were at Mt. Rainier. At the lodge, later, she spotted four Boy Scouts, picked out the biggest one, and said, "Let's dance." He blushed, stammered, and fled. Shirley approached with aversion. She did not know who had been at fault in the accident. Probably Zeke, in coming out on the highway. She only knew they must get the baked hams to the Pendennis Club as they had contracted to do. She said decisively to her trembling sister, "Let's stand here and hail somebody to pick up Zeke and the hams."

"No!" said the dark stranger, making a quick decision. "Leave it to me. I'll take the old man and your stuff myself. I'll pay damages on your car, too. Stand over there by the gate while I look it over. Stand well back out of the road."

The girls and Zeke obeyed. Kate whispered to Caroline, "So it was his fault! And he admits it! Pinch me if I'm dreaming."

WHILE they waited near the stone gate, the man made an expert investigation of the car he had damaged. He tried the motor, which, strange to say, still ran. He examined the lights, the windshield, the windows, the chassis. He used tools from his own car in the investigation. When he had finished he returned the tools to his car, wiped his hands on a flashy handkerchief from his coat pocket, and approached them.

Sensing Kate's leadership, he addressed her. "Fifty dollars will fix it up. The motor ain't hurt. You'll need a new fender and a few other little repairs." He drew a roll of bills from his pocket and skinned off the top one. Kate saw that it was actually $50, and thanked him.

A passing roadster slowed to a stop and the stranger waved it on. "No help needed!" he called. A truck, following immediately after, received the same information. To Kate he said confidentially, "No use dragging other people into this. It's our business, yeah?"

When the road was clear again he said briskly, "Well, let's move the meat to my car and get goin'. I can't fool around."

This was done, but just as Zeke was about to step into the stranger's automobile, Kate surprised Caroline by saying, "I'd rather Zeke stayed here with our car. My sister and I will go into town with you and deliver the hams. Is your car all right?"

It appeared that it was. The luxurious big machine with an eastern license had suffered nothing but a loosened fender and broken headlights. Presently they were moving off.

For five miles, perhaps, no one spoke. Then the man said abruptly, "You'll have some spare parts stolen, I'm afraid, while the old man's telephoning."

A few more miles in silence, and Kate made a discovery. "Oh, dear!" she said. "One ham's a wreck! Gravel's worked through where the paper's torn!"

"Cooked ham?" came an interested query from the front.

"Yes," answered Kate. "Can't you smell it? Slow baked."

Suddenly the man was looking back at them, a slender, shining knife in his hand. "Cut me a hunk!" he commanded. "I haven't had time to eat since yesterday noon."

Kate took the knife, gingerly. She began to cut the ham. She knew the man had stolen their license plates. She was wondering what she should do.

"It's all such a waste!" Caroline said. "Such a wicked waste!"

tages, I mean. If I could get my degree, maybe I could get a good job and help with the finances."

Kate said passionately, "Grant-dought ought to raise the money for you! I'm going to talk to him about it—"

The conversation was not finished, for a most startling reason. They were emerging on the highway and Zeke was shifting gears; suddenly there was a roar, a crash of sound and an impact. The Meed sedan careened and turned completely over, landing, miraculously, on its four wheels.

For a few moments there was a queer, heavy silence. Then a jumble of sounds, discordantly blended. A strange voice was cursing in a foreign language. Zeke was praying in a frightened, sing-song monotone. Kate was leaning over her still sister and calling frantically, "Are you hurt, Caroline? Are you? Are you?"

The owner of the profane voice got out of a big black sedan—the sedan that had struck the Meed car—and approached them. He jerked at the door. When he had gotten it open he pulled Zeke from the car and made him stand upright.

He shook the old Negro and said excitedly, "One of 'em's hurt! Gimme a hand here!" He spoke with a foreign accent.

Caroline opened her eyes and rubbed her head. "Where am I?" she asked, looking at her sister in bewilderment.

"Oh, darling!" Kate cried. "You can speak! We're on the state pike. Right by the big gate. Somebody ran into us. I think it only struck our fender, but it turned us over and around. Do you think something's broken, Caroline? Some of your bones, I mean?"

Caroline moaned, shifting her shoulders. "All of 'em," she answered with an effort at levity. "At least it feels that way."

KATE laughed hysterically. Then she looked up to see the dark, heavy stranger peering at them. Afterward, trying to describe him to her grandfather, she said, "He had a shattered face and tailored clothes. He was chewing a cigar."

She said to this man now, "Get us out of here! Get us both out! There's something heavy on my foot!"

The dark foreigner got them out. He was efficient and rather dynamic. He worked rapidly. "We don't want a crowd gathering," he said, panting a little.

Over at the side of the road, Zeke continued to pray, loudly and ardently, and to intersperse his petitions with the word "harm."

"What's he saying?" asked the stranger, jerking his thumb in Zeke's direction.

Kate explained. "We were taking some baked hams to a club restaurant in Louisville. They're due early this morning. Zeke's thanking God that we weren't killed and asking him how we're going to get the hams there on time."

"Oh yeah," said the heavy man, chewing his cigar. "It's important? I mean, have you gotta get 'em there?"

Kate nodded, looking at him

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

An Eccentric Dad, Inventor Maxim!

You must look along time to find a more completely refreshing book than "A Genius in the Family," by Hiram Percy Maxim (Harpers, $2). In this book Mr. Maxim tells what it is like to have an eccentric inventor for a father. His father was Sir Hiram Stevens Maxim, inventor of the rapid-fire gun; as fathers go, he seems to have been quite a specimen.

We find him, for instance, getting a brass bean-shooter to bombard the local cop who descended into an areaway across the streets each Sunday morning to have soft words with the kitchen maid—and we see him also, years later, when he had grown rich and world-famous, absconding himself from his London cronies each evening to conduct a similar bombardment on a Salvation Army band.

Sir Hiram is told he needs exercise; in frock coat and plug hat he runs at top speed down the main steps of Brooklyn until ready to drop. He reads that exertive heat feels like extreme cold; he experiments on his wife's cook with a hot poker, and completely disrupts the domestic establishment.

As a rugged individualist, he was perfect; as a father he may have had his defects. But whatever else it may have been, life in the Maxim home never can have been dull. It had spice, and a savor all its own.

There are about two hours of extremely enjoyable reading in this book.

the other three in turn. They blushed, too; blurted that they didn't know how to dance.

Bill Robinson is confident that she's going to be the most astonishing stage dancer of all time; says she has picked up tricks that he hasn't been able to teach present-day celebrities. Study her tap routines in "Dimples" and you'll see what Robinson means.

Miss Temple is reading adventure stories now—small-boy stuff; and is especially fond of the Oz books. Her radio favorite is the Cheerful Philosopher, and she wants to write him an indorsement.

The other morning she turned on a program of calisthenics, followed it for a few minutes, dialed it off. "Mother," she said, "that man tires me out."

A whole carload of Quaker Oats and other Quaker cereals has already been unloaded by the Ritchie Grocer company and this fresh stock is being distributed to the merchants of Hempstead county for their fall trade.

This is more Quaker Oats than usually comes into this territory, but M. M. In this week's Star begins a series of advertisements which will continue for several months, showing the advantages for health and tastiness possessed by the Quaker Oats.

The Star will occasionally run menus giving various types of food dishes featuring the use of Quaker Oats.

It takes so little to make us sad: Just a slighting word or a doubting sneer, Just a scornful smile on some lips held dear, And our footsteps lag, the goal seemed near, And we lose the courage and hope we had— So little it takes to make us sad.

It takes so little to make us glad: Just a cheering clasp of a friendly hand, Just a word from one who can understand, And we finish the task we long had planned, And we lose the doubt and fear we had— So little it takes to make us glad. —Selected.

Mrs. C. S. Lowthorp and Mrs. Glen Durham were Thursday visitors in Little Rock.

As special compliment to Mrs. M. Stanowski, who has been the guest of her son, Father Stanowski, for the past two months, a surprise good-bye dinner was given by the ladies of Our Lady of Good Hope church on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Tauer on South Main street. The Junior-Senior High P. T. A. held its first meeting of the school year on Thursday afternoon at the high school, with forty mothers present. The meeting was called to order by the retiring president, Mrs. Dossett, and a very beautiful devotional was given by Mrs. P. S. Foltz, a spiritualist. "Go Down Moses" was sung by a quartette from the Friday Music club. Mrs. Dossett read the president's message, and Miss Milburn told of the needs of the high school library. The faculty was introduced and the new officers were presented as follows: President, Mrs. W. L. Carter; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Ward; secretary, Mrs. G. T. Cross. Home rule mothers were appointed, and Miss Billingsley's room received the dollar for having the greatest percentage of mothers present.

Becoming a Christian
Devotional Reading: 1st Corinthians 13:1-10

The growth of the Christian church through persecution and martyrdom could find no more striking, direct, and colorful illustration than in the conversion of the Philippian jailer.

Because of the uproar that their unpopular religious teachings had aroused, Paul and Silas were arrested and thrust into prison after they had had "many stripes laid upon them," or, as we would say in modern terms, "had been severely flogged."

So intense was the zeal of the persecutors that they had the jailer make sure the prisoners could not escape. For his own protection as well as for the safe-keeping of his prisoners, the jailer not only thrust them into the inner prison, but made their feet fast in the stocks.

Could prisoners in such a plight find any occasion for light or rejoicing? Here, it would seem, was a circumstance that might have daunted the stoutest soul, but Paul and Silas, out of the joy and inspiration of their faith, were praying and singing hymns to God while their fellow prisoners listened.

Suddenly there came a great earthquake, in which the foundations were shaken, the doors opened, and everyone's bonds loosed. The jailer, roused from his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, was about to kill himself when Paul cried loudly, "Do yourself no harm, for we are all here."

It was an amazing scene. Under Paul's example and influence, prisoners with every opportunity for escaping refused to run away. The jailer was so stricken that he called for light, and fell down with trembling and fear before Paul and Silas saying, "What must I do to be saved?"

He may have meant only what must he do to save himself from punishment by those in authority over him, or his question may have had a deeper meaning, for he could hardly have been in contact with Paul and Silas without knowing something of the salvation that they proclaimed. His strange experience may have given him a new understanding, and it may have been with sincere meaning and concern for his soul that he inquired about salvation.

At any rate, Paul interpreted the question in the larger way. The whole scene was changed. There was no longer need of stocks and bonds and

Prize-Winning Calves Shown at the County Fair

Like a lot of prospective voters, these young ladies at Santa Rosa, Calif., are on the fence. But it's not because the girls are puzzled by political trends. They just want a better look at the exhibits of fruits, vegetables, and livestock brought in from the countryside for the annual Sonoma county fair. Other spectators, incidentally, were more interested in the display of calves.

Cream of Oatmeal Soup Is Favorite

Direction for Making This Delicious Soup Is Given

Creamed soups will always be the favorite in some households. And in those households, Cream of Oatmeal soup comes near to topping the list of champions. This delicious soup is most easy to make, too.

To one cup cooked and strained Quaker Oats—ground—add four cups of highly seasoned chicken or veal stock; season to taste with salt and pepper, tablespoon of onion juice, and one-half tablespoon finely chopped parsley. Bring soup to boiling point, remove from range and add a half cup of scalded cream and the yolks of two raw eggs, well beaten; mix well. Do not allow soup to boil after adding eggs.

Humming Birds a Hobby for Texan

500 of Them Cultivated by Veteran in Government Hospital

LEGION, Tex.—(AP)—Supervising the daily diet of approximately 500 humming birds is the odd hobby W. R. Sullivan has chosen.

Groups of the tiny birds dart into Sullivan's room at the Veterans Administration hospital, alight momentarily on light fixtures, zoom around the ceiling and are gone.

Twenty-five boxes for food have been placed throughout the hospital grounds. A container of sweetened water outside Sullivan's window attracts the greatest number. The birds start their visit the middle of March and remain until September.

Sullivan said some of them have a wingspread of eight inches, although the average is two and a half.

prisons to keep these prisoners. Bringing them into his house, the jailer washed their stripes and set food before them while upon him and all his household was performed the rite of baptism, the symbol of new life and new joy.

All truly vital Christian experience has some such beginning. It is with a new understanding that may discover his soul's need, the reality of truth that he had not known before, and the power of God's grace giving him new convictions and a new will. This, however, is only beginning.

In the verses of the lesson from the third chapter of Philippians, we have a suggestion of the true nature and goal of the Christian way. It is the way of that complete consecration and surrender in which the presence and power of Christ fill the heart, thrusting out ignorance and fear and self-will, and everything that keeps the soul of man in bondage.

FIRST CZAR OF THE BULGARS

GREEK culture had stood young Simeon, son of the Bulgar King Boris, in good stead, and so, when he ascended the throne of Bulgaria in 893, he brought Greek learning to the Slavs. He even helped translate Greek writings for the benefit of his people.

But Simeon went further, in an effort to increase the power and prestige of Bulgaria. He fought back the Greeks. He chased the savage Magyars across the Danube. And he extended Bulgar territory to the greatest limits in its history.

Not content with military supremacy, Simeon freed the Bulgar church from Greek dominance, and set himself up as "Czar of the Bulgars and Autocrat of the Romans (Greeks)." Bulgar power was at its highest when Simeon died in 927, but his son Peter could not carry on his policies. Instead, he sought peace with the Greeks, revolt spread, and the empire Simeon had built began to crumble.

A profile of the great Czar Simeon appears on one of the stamps of Bulgaria, issued in 1929 to commemorate the millennium of his reign.

GRIDIRON HEROES

IOWA has turned out some great gridiron heroes in Big Ten competition. One of the greatest was Aubrey Devine, captain and All-America quarterback in 1921. With Duke Slater, giant Negro tackle, opening huge holes, and Craven Shuttleworth and Glen Devine running interference, Aubrey probably gave the greatest exhibition of his career against Minnesota that year, the Hawkeyes winning, 41-7.

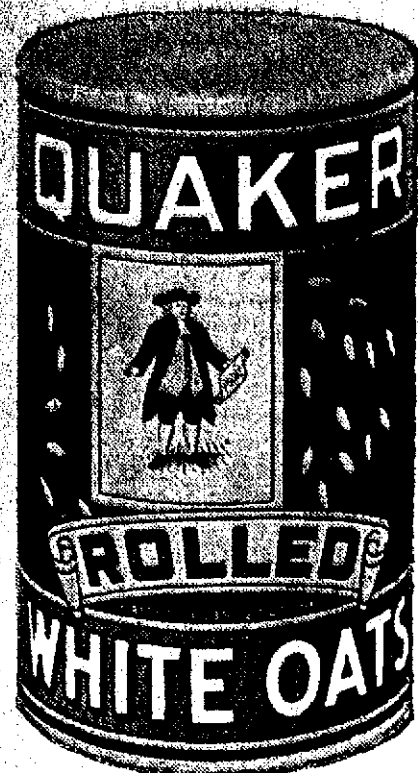

Devine scored four touchdowns and made five of six place kicks after touchdown for 29 points. In addition, he passed to Lester Belding for Iowa's other two counters.

The likable field general did all of his team's punting in addition to most of the ball carrying. His total yardage on return of punts and plays from scrimmage was 342, and his longest gain was 50 yards on a kickoff.

At present he is assistant to his old Iowa coach, Howard Jones, at Southern California.

Mr. Local Merchant You Can Sell Them If You Tell Them Through The Hope Star.

Here's Why---

Here is a concrete example of what national advertisers think of when they get under way on a selling campaign.

The Quaker Oats Company is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in this sales campaign. But before they begin, they analyze and work to the end that they may obtain the greatest results for each advertising dollar they spend.

They have selected The Hope Star as the vehicle to carry their messages to the buyers. They know The Star can do the job for them... they are convinced of Hope Star's quality circulation... they know The Hope Star is a quality newspaper that enters the homes of families that buy quality merchandise... they know that for every advertising dollar they spend, they get a dollar's worth of advertising force and twenty-five cents worth of co-operative service. Try this formula for your own business. It'll work!
